Description

Charming antique flycatcher or wasp trap, late 19th/early 20th century, made of blown glass, with a globular tripod shape and three feet applied while hot. Handcrafted, typical of late 19th-century French utilitarian glass, the slightly pinkish glass stopper is not original but complements the piece perfectly, as it is a flycatcher stopper. Approximately 20cm high with the stopper, 15cm maximum diameter. In very good overall condition, with no cracks or chips, only a few discreet marks and micro-scratches from use and slight nicks on the neck, without any impact on its function. Approximately 500g.
