Description

Hand-painted earthenware, "Delft" pattern, 20th century. Elegant and majestic, this large cachepot from the Geomartel factory embodies one of the pinnacles of craftsmanship from the Desvres workshops in the 20th century. Modeled in generous and perfectly balanced earthenware, it is distinguished by its ample silhouette, supported by a wide and stable base, and by the spectacular presence of two powerfully sculpted chimera heads that emerge on either side of the body like mythological guardians. The entire decoration, entirely hand-painted, reveals remarkable pictorial mastery: a profusion of stylized flowers, in shades of yellow, orange, and blue, unfolds against a luminous white background, enlivened by delicately shaded green foliage. This composition, inspired by the great "Delft" decorations, testifies to a subtle dialogue between Northern European tradition and French interpretation, where the artisan's hand reveals a keen sensitivity and great freedom of gesture. The rim, highlighted by a blue and yellow geometric frieze, brings a touch of graphic balance to this floral profusion. Under the base, the handwritten inscription "handmade Geomartel - Delft decoration" confirms the origin, the artisanal quality, and the complete pictorial execution of the piece. Rare in its presence, this cachepot is also distinguished by its exceptional state of preservation: no chips, no cracks, no restoration--a freshness that further enhances its appeal to discerning collectors. Dimensions: Height: 43.5 cm; Total width (head to head of chimeras): 39 cm; Diameter at opening: 33.5 cm; Diameter at base: 28 cm
