Description

Daum Nancy Poppy Covered Pot. A masterful Art Nouveau work in multi-layered glass and vitrified powders. This remarkable covered pot in multi-layered glass, from the renowned Daum workshops in Nancy, embodies the pinnacle of naturalism of the Nancy School. Standing 15 cm tall with a generous diameter of approximately 13 cm, this compact, baluster-shaped piece is distinguished by the complexity of its manufacturing technique. The glass, blown with great skill, incorporates layers of vitrified powders in shades of saffron yellow, amber, and orange. This technical process creates a marbled background of exceptional depth, simulating a twilight light that seems to emanate from the very heart of the material. The decoration, entirely etched with acid and then finished with a wheel, unfolds a complete and narrative botanical study of the poppy. The artist chose to represent the plant's complete life cycle, subtly juxtaposing the flower bud, the fully opened bloom with its vibrant carmine petals, and the characteristically capped seed capsule. This contrast between the chromatic power of the corollas and the bronze-green tones of the lobed foliage at the base is magnified by a play of textures between the finely acid-etched background and the satin polish of the floral motifs. The lid, the centerpiece of this ensemble, ensures perfect aesthetic continuity thanks to its sinuous stems that follow the convexity of the glass. The authenticity and precious nature of this collector's item are confirmed by the handwritten signature "Daum ? Nancy" affixed to the base. Under the base, the presence of the workshop inventory number 48668, accompanied by the handwritten technical notations "dss" and "pss," attests to rigorous production monitoring. These workshop markings guarantee The piece benefited from the finest finishing techniques employed by the Lorraine glassworks, making this covered pot an exceptional historical example of early 20th-century art glass.
