Description

A beautiful antique religious painting, dating from the 18th century, sure to captivate lovers of sacred art and history. This oil on canvas has been carefully relined to preserve its structure and beauty through the centuries. It depicts a moving and timeless scene: the Virgin Mary, surrounded by angels, gazing upon the infant Jesus lying on a cushion delicately placed on a bed of straw. This iconography, rich in symbolism, evokes the tenderness, spirituality, and serenity characteristic of Marian representations of the period. Perhaps it was originally part of a trumeau or antique wood paneling, integrated into a larger setting? This adds a historical and architectural dimension to this piece, which could have adorned a noble interior or a place of worship. The canvas, as a whole, is in good condition. There is simply a small mark at the bottom, which does not detract from the clarity of the scene and could be reduced by professional cleaning. A varnishing would also be recommended to restore this work to its original luminosity and colors, thus revealing its former splendor. This painting is framed in a 19th-century giltwood frame, which, although later than the canvas, harmonizes perfectly with its style and period. The frame, with its keyed and pegged assembly, is a fine example of the exceptional craftsmanship of this era. Its dimensions, 39 x 45.5 cm, make it a piece easily integrated into various spaces, whether a living room, an office, or a gallery. The combination of the canvas and its frame creates an elegant and coherent whole, ideal for collectors or enthusiasts of religious art. This painting is a true invitation to contemplation, an artistic and spiritual testament that transcends the centuries. It would be a valuable addition to any collection of Old Master art, bringing with it a touch of grace and piety. Don't hesitate to restore it to its former glory and display it in a place where it can be admired for its true worth.
