Description

Here is a pair of polychrome biscuit porcelain figurines that will captivate art and history enthusiasts with their timeless charm. These two figures, dressed in typical 18th-century costumes, depict a romantic scene in which a young boy delicately offers a bouquet of flowers to a young lady. This type of representation, imbued with grace and refinement, is particularly rare on the antiques market, making these exceptional pieces for discerning collectors. The finely crafted details of the clothing reflect the elegance and skill of the artisans of the period. The figurines rest on richly gilded bases, adding a touch of luxury and sophistication to the whole. There is a small imperfection under the base of the figurine representing the young lady, but it is discreet and does not detract from the overall beauty of the piece. A mysterious inscription appears beneath each figurine, but its exact origin remains undetermined, adding an element of mystery to these works. Dating from the 19th century, these statuettes are in remarkable overall condition, despite this minor flaw. At 25 cm tall, they will fit perfectly in a display case or on a shelf, adding a touch of elegance and romance to your home. These delicate yet characterful pieces are ideal for antique art enthusiasts and collectors seeking rarity. Their presence in a collection or interior will bring a unique historical and artistic dimension. Don't miss the opportunity to acquire these statuettes, which combine beauty, history, and rarity.
