Description

Bust of a young woman with a hat, signed R. Febrari. The face, sculpted in Carrara marble, contrasts elegantly with the bronze garment. The piece rests on a veined marble base, adding a beautiful decorative presence. Very good condition. R. Febrari was a sculptor active during the late 19th and early 20th centuries. He is primarily associated with the production of high-quality decorative sculptures, typical of the Art Deco period. His work is characterized by the creation of elegant female busts, often executed in combination with noble materials such as marble, gilt bronze, and decorative stone bases. This combination of materials highlights the refinement and aesthetic modernity characteristic of artistic production in the 1920s and 1930s. Sculptures signed Febrari are part of the tradition
