Description

Large decorative ceramic platter signed "LACHENAL," for Raoul Lachenal (1885-1956), one of the great French ceramists of the interwar period. Son of Edmond Lachenal, he developed his own style, blending Orientalist and Neo-Iznik influences, with structured compositions and a keen sense of color and decoration. This platter, shaped like a dome with a wide basin and a high, truncated conical rim, features a naturalistic decoration of vine leaves and bunches of grapes painted under the glaze, with a manganese outline, colored fill, and subtle shading on an ivory ground. The rim is adorned with a garland of stylized leaves in arabesques. The reverse bears the centered handwritten signature "LACHENAL" as well as a hand-painted vertical monogram TSL, typical of Raoul Lachenal's
