Description

Dogon warrior sculpture in gilded bronze modernist tribal art mid-20th centuryResulting from the Dogon craftsmanship (tribes of Mali), this work represents a warrior or warrior spirit inspired by the cosmogony of the Dogon people, unique and specific to their culture & mythology.Its particular shape, standing and holding weapons followed by a horned mask makes it an effigy between popular art and ethnic sacred art, its posture making more of a fetish, or at least, a decorative work going in this direction, rather than a ritual statue.In very good general condition, this gilded bronze sculpture is unique; the Dogon people are instructed to only make bronze by lost wax casting, in unique terracotta and clay molds that are destroyed during the unmolding, attesting to the craftsmanship quality
