Description

The "Le Corbusier LC1 Basculant" chair is an icon of modern design. Also known as the "Fauteuil à dossier basculant," it was designed in 1928 by renowned architects and designers Le Corbusier, Pierre Jeanneret, and Charlotte Perriand. This design is a beautiful example of functional perfection and the minimalist design language of the Bauhaus, which prioritized functionality while simultaneously pioneering a "new" elegance. The open tubular steel frame is upholstered, both on the seat and backrest, in thick, black full-grain leather (vegetable-tanned cowhide), giving the chair a particularly elegant silhouette. The backrest is designed with a pivot point in the center, allowing it to move and adapt flexibly to the user's posture. The frame bears the designer's signature and a unique serial number,
