Description

This ring, with its understated and classic design, adheres to the conventions of a solitaire, flanked by diamonds. Its aesthetic draws inspiration from the Art Deco period. Indeed, it is crafted from platinum (hallmarked with the dog's head), the preferred metal of that era. The center stone, an old-cut diamond estimated at 3.95 carats, dates from the late 19th/early 20th century, and such stones were commonly set during the Art Deco period. Its age and the specific nature of its cut give it a rare and unique character, particularly in this size. Its authenticity, due to its age, cannot be disputed. The setting is highly evocative of Art Deco lines, particularly its double prongs which, joined at the top, form structures with a characteristic aesthetic around the stone. The step diamonds set at the shoulders complete this
