Description

This 1950s industrial floor lamp features a robust metal spotlight head mounted on an adjustable tripod stand, exemplifying mid-century functional design. The rectangular housing, with its ribbed rear casing and thick glass front panel, reflects the utilitarian engineering of post-war industrial lighting, while the aged metal surface and visible hardware lend it an authentic workshop aesthetic. Subtle patina and light surface wear enhance its character, emphasizing its original purpose-built construction. The adjustable tilt mechanism and extendable stand introduce both sculptural presence and practical versatility, allowing the lamp to direct light with precision. Its restrained palette of muted greys and weathered steel underscores a clean, architectural silhouette that
