Description

Industrial bistro tablesThese tables feature a round tabletop with a contrasting edge and a cast iron or metal tripod base. They resemble Tolix Model IX tables, but their legs are different.The tops are often covered with melamine, while the legs are made of cast iron.Although they were originally designed as bistro tables, they are now often used as decorative stools, for example to hold plants.The top measures 24 cm in diameter and the height is 32 cm or 40 cm.Slight signs of wear on the tops and oxidation on the base.French design from the 1950s.
