Description

An elegant Directoire-style console table in solid oak, dating from the 19th century, entirely cerused, with three drawers on the front. It rests on four carved and fluted legs, joined by a wide stretcher shelf offering ample space for display or storage. The richly crafted uprights emphasize the refined simplicity characteristic of the Directoire style. A beautiful, slightly grayed white patina, subtly worn by time, highlights the wood grain and lends it considerable charm and authenticity. Ideal as an entryway console, an occasional table in a living room, or a side table in a dining room. A fine piece of work. Good overall condition, with signs of wear consistent with its age and contributing to its character. Delivery upon request. Enjoy your visit to our gallery!
