Description

A superb contemporary sculpture from the 1990s, with a strong decorative presence. This spectacular piece consists of an openwork sphere in naturally oxidized patinated iron, crafted with a complex interplay of curves and organic cutouts. The metal, intentionally left to rust, develops a vibrant and warm texture with deep brown hues, highly sought after in contemporary interiors. The internal structure, organized around a central axis, creates an effect of perpetual movement.

Depending on the viewing angle, the sculpture transforms, constantly offering a new interpretation. A living work of art. The contrast between the raw power of the iron and the purity of the light stone cubic base enhances its elegance and balance. The sculpture bears a dedication beneath the base. Year: 1990 Material: Oxidized
