Description

A large bronze sculpture from the late 19th century, signed Madame Signoret-Sedieu, depicting Joan of Arc in a contemplative pose, her gaze turned towards the heavens. The work reflects the patriotic revival that followed 1870, a period during which Joan of Arc once again became central to the French national consciousness. Here, the artist favors an introspective and spiritual vision over a warlike representation, emphasizing the mystical dimension of the figure. The base bears the title "Joan of Arc" as well as a heraldic shield evoking the arms traditionally attributed to the heroine--a symbolic reminder of the honors bestowed upon her after the victories of Orléans and Reims, reinforcing the historical significance of the sculpture.
