Description

This 1932 oil painting presents a richly detailed floral still life arranged in a ceramic vase, rendered with careful naturalism and balanced composition. Lilac blossoms, peonies, and clustered garden flowers unfold across a warm, earthy background, their soft mauves, blush pinks, creamy whites, and deep greens creating a harmonious and layered palette. Controlled brushwork and subtle tonal transitions model the petals and foliage with depth, while gentle lighting draws attention to texture and volume without disrupting the calm symmetry of the arrangement. Rooted in nineteenth and early twentieth-century European still life tradition, the work reflects academic training and a sustained interest in botanical realism, offering a refined and timeless decorative presence.
