sister-in-law Clotilde Vautier, also painters, and they exhibited together in numerous Breton galleries from the 1960s onwards. Mariano Otero continued to paint until the end of his life, exhibiting in France, Spain, and many countries around the world. From 1992, his work, primarily figurative, gave pride of place to women through portraits, nudes, tango scenes, bar scenes, and more, using highly sensitive oil paintings and pastels. A representative oil painting of his work, Isabelle in a White Shirt, from 1962, is held at the Museum of Fine Arts in Rennes.
