Description

Large 19th-century textile panel composed of a wide background of midnight blue silk velvet framing a central design and richly embroidered satin silk borders. The design unfolds vertically in a large, naturalistic floral motif rendered in polychrome. The flowers, in shades of pink, coral, cream, pale blue, and green, are executed in silk thread using various embroidery techniques (stretch stitch, stem stitch, and low-relief highlights), creating beautiful depth and delicate modeling. The side borders feature a lighter floral pattern, elegantly structuring the whole. The panel is lined with silk velvet. A characteristic piece from the mid-19th century, reminiscent of decorative textiles intended for furnishings or wall decoration.
