Table clock Finely gilded bronze Paris movement, anchor escapement, striking mechanism with counting wheel, striking on the hour and half hour Dimensions: H. 55; W. 21; D. 13 (cm.) Paris and Lyon, circa 1830 Large architectural clock. It rests on a quadrangular base with three tiers. The central body is framed by flying buttresses and small columns with pinnacles. The dial with "Gothic" numerals is an integral part of this idealized cathedral facade. These models were very successful, as evidenced by the many silver, green, and brown patina variants. Raingo signed a number of them, which could possibly indicate that he produced the bronze elements himself... Historicism The
