Description

A very fine cabinet made of various woods, opening at the front with two large drawers and three doors. Our piece is composed of two superimposed sections. The lower section rests on two square feet at the rear and two ball feet at the front, all surmounted by a wide plinth. It opens with two doors decorated with attractive bossing in small diamond points. A central jamb separates them and is integral to the frame. The upper section is atypical, opening with a single door also worked in diamond points and offset to the right. To its left is a compartment adorned with three square diamond points. The sides are worked in plaques with two rounded edges. Our piece has undergone some minor repairs; the rear feet have been shortened, and one has a wooden reinforcement plate; the ball feet have been
