Description

An elegant polychrome bronze and marble group depicting an Orientalist hunter, signed Gori. This beautiful sculpture features a crouching Oriental figure, armed with a rifle, in a tense and realistic pose of observation. The contrast between the dark flesh tones of the finely chiseled bronze and the clothing rendered in sculpted white marble lends the piece a powerful decorative presence. The figure rests on a richly veined marble base with warm hues, evoking a rocky terrain. The highly dynamic composition reveals a remarkable attention to detail: precise anatomical modeling, a focused facial expression, and supple, naturalistic drapery. The Gori signature is visible on the drapery. Period: late 19th - early 20th century. Materials: Bronze and sculpted marble. Very good condition, a beautiful and harmonious
