Description

A pair of okimono depicting a rooster and a hen, finely modeled in white Hirado porcelain and distinguished by an exceptional naturalistic rendering.

The rooster is portrayed in an alert stance, with its tail elegantly raised, while the hen, more compact and gathered in posture, is captured in a quiet maternal moment, with a chick emerging from beneath her plumage.

The larger and more imposing rooster is conceived as an incense burner.

Period: Edo period, first half of the 19th century

Dimensions (rooster): 23 × 15 × 10 cm

Dimensions (hen): 10 × 16 × 9 cm

Condition: Excellent condition.
