Description

A charming object rarely seen except on museums, seldom offered for sale, and fetching exorbitant prices. A Louis XVI period waistcoat button, made from brass, iron, bone, and blown glass, crafted by Parisian button makers during the reign of Queen Marie Antoinette. Consult please the collections of Parisian museums such as Jacquemart-André and Carnavalet museums; you will likely find one. This particular button is intact, glass is unscratched, there is no moisture damage, and its charming allegorical motif represents love, friendship, and a peaceful welcome. Beautiful original condition.
