Description

DescriptionThis oil on canvas depicts a young woman seated on a wooden bench, absorbed in playing a recorder. Executed in a muted palette of soft creams, warm flesh tones, and subdued greys, the composition is defined by smooth brushwork, balanced proportions, and controlled lighting that gently models the figure against a dark, understated background. The subject's downward gaze and relaxed posture create a quiet, introspective mood, while the broad-brimmed hat and flowing white garment lend the scene a timeless, classical character. The work reflects a contemporary figurative realist approach, with careful anatomical rendering and a restrained, harmonious treatment of tone and form.ArtistUnidentified artist (20th century).Artist DetailsThe signature present on
