Description

A rare pair of armchairs attributed to Alain Richard, a major figure in 1950s French design, renowned for his functional elegance and clean lines. These armchairs feature a structure typical of post-war modernism: generously padded seat and back, original fabric upholstery in a lovely mottled brick red, black tubular metal legs with glides, and white lacquered wood side panels forming a distinctive graphic line. The design is particularly well-balanced, with suspended armrests that provide lightness and comfort. The discreet button tufting of the backrest underscores the modernist influence while maintaining a sense of restraint. Very good overall condition. Original fabric in good condition with a beautiful patina (minor signs of normal wear). Solid and stable frame.
