Oil on canvas (relined) 76 × 76 cm (with frame)
In 1762, Dezallier d'Argenville mentions a portrait of Jeanne-Agnès Berthelot de Pléneuf (1698-1727) painted by Jean-Baptiste Van Loo. Jeanne-Agnès Berthelot de Pléneuf, Marquise de Prie, was a French aristocrat. Mistress of the Duke of Bourbon, she wielded considerable influence at the court of the young Louis XV for several years. Van Loo's work was very successful, as evidenced by the numerous versions and copies preserved today. One example is notably held at the Hermitage Museum in Saint Petersburg. The portrait painted by Van Loo was engraved by Jacques Chéreau the Younger (1688-1776). The present painting is a contemporary copy of the master's work.
