Description

A 16th-century Spanish candlestick in turned bronze. This candlestick has a simple, architectural silhouette, typical of the Iberian Renaissance. It consists of an openwork cylindrical stem, adorned with discreet moldings, resting on a wide, circular holder for collecting the wax. The flared base ensures stability and balance. The bronze retains a beautiful antique patina with warm tones, showing signs of wear and oxidation consistent with its age. An elegant and robust piece, representative of 16th-century Spanish production.
