Description

Oil on canvas. The original, painted in 1592 and exhibited in the Risaliti Chapel in Santa Croce, Florence, was enormously successful, so much so that numerous copies were produced, including later and non-autograph copies. This beautifully crafted eighteenth-century version is smaller in size, perhaps intended for personal devotion in a private chapel. The work depicts the Trinity in glory, with the Father supporting the dead body of the Son, above whose head the Holy Spirit hovers; surrounded by angels and archangels, and at Jesus' feet, still resting on the earth, are depicted the instruments of torture and death on the cross. The painting has been restored and relined in the past. The work is presented in a beautiful contemporary frame, with rich floral decorations (the decoration at the top left is
