Description

Bust of Frédéric Chopin, in glazed white porcelain, after a model by the Italian sculptor Raphaël Nannini (1852-1925). The composer is depicted in bust form, his head slightly inclined, his features softened, and his hair finely wavy, in an interpretation faithful to the Romantic iconography of the early 20th century. The precise and balanced modeling testifies to Nannini's characteristic naturalistic sensibility, whose portraits are distinguished by their academic elegance and subtle attention to expression. The smooth, glossy surface of the porcelain highlights the purity of the forms and lends the piece a luminous presence. Inside, an old paper label remains, probably affixed by a previous owner; preserved as is, it constitutes an interesting documentary element, attesting to the
