Description

This early 18th-century sculpture depicts a kneeling angel wearing a richly draped robe, which appears to be partly gilded, with raised details in the garment typical of religious sculpture of this period. The facial features are gentle, almost childlike, with carefully sculpted curly hair. The statue's hands are slightly open, which could indicate a posture of prayer or blessing. The polychrome paint, although partially altered by time, still reveals the colors used to highlight the details of the robe and face.
