Description

A highly colorful decorative stained-glass panel, featuring a central bouquet of flowers (red, orange, yellow, purple) in a large stylized vase, with floral and arabesque motifs in pale blue tones highlighted by a colored border (green, amber). The small cabochons add a delightful touch. The panel is assembled using broken glass and lead cames (a traditional stained-glass technique). This type of stained glass is in the Art Nouveau style, a workshop piece inspired by tradition. The size is typical of a door panel, transom, or narrow window in a bourgeois home. 20th century, circa 1900
