Description

Impressive oil on canvas by Roberto Platé, "Framed Studio Corner," 1970s. Large oil on canvas signed Roberto Platé, a "studio corner" composition treated in a very contemporary style.

The work plays on a construction of frames/segments, like a fragmented view, with perspective lines and reflections. A deep palette (greens, blues, ochres, reds) and marked contrasts give it a real presence on the wall. Its imposing size makes it ideal as a centerpiece in a living room, hall, or professional space. An interesting exploration of light, texture, and space, typical of the pictorial research of the 1970s. Roberto Platé developed a painting style focused on space, structure, and the sensation of depth (studio, interior, architecture). His language is that of a recomposed figuration: fragments, frames, and
