Description

A faun playing cymbals or dancing faun, after the antique, housed in the Uffizi Gallery in Florence. This piece, which entered the Medici family collection at the end of the 16th century, is attributed to Praxiteles, the famous sculptor of the 4th century BC. Our faun is made of terracotta with a black patina, highlighting the quality of its execution. Good condition, restoration to the base visible underneath (see photo).
