Max Agostini occupies a unique place in 20th-century French painting. Born in 1914, he developed very early on a keen eye for light and atmosphere, which would become the hallmark of his entire oeuvre. A passionate self-taught artist, he gradually established himself as a master of landscape painting, capable of capturing with rare sensitivity the vibrations of the sky, the gentleness of a shoreline, or the poetry of a Provençal village. His instantly recognizable style blends a lively and generous touch with a luminous palette, often dominated by deep blues and warm ochres. Agostini paints en plein air, as close to nature as possible, which lends his canvases a spontaneity and sincerity highly valued by collectors. His works have been exhibited in numerous French and international galleries and are now featured in several private collections.
