Description

French School, 19th century (dated 1893). In its original gilt frame with richly carved decoration, this charming oil on canvas depicts a bouquet of flowers in soft, nuanced tones (whites, powder pinks, coral, and deep green foliage), rendered with finesse against a subtly patinated light background. The elegant and balanced composition highlights the delicate handling of light and volume. The petals are finely modeled, with a naturalistic style characteristic of late 19th-century floral painting. The work is signed at the bottom (signature visible in the photos) and dated 1893 on the reverse of the stretcher. A Parisian canvas merchant's stamp is also present on the back, attesting to the artist's purchase of materials in Paris. Technical Specifications
