Description

An oil on canvas signed L. Henry, depicting a coastal scene where the power of the sea and the activity of fishermen intertwine. In the foreground, a large fishing boat with ochre-red sails is being pulled towards the shore. Two men guide it while a third unties the rope that held it to the beach. Further out, two women gather seaweed, tucking it into their raised skirts. This work sensitively captures the collective effort and the rhythm imposed by the movements of the sea. Waves break into foam on the shore, lending a powerful dynamism to the composition. The light, diffuse and slightly dramatic, reflects on the choppy water and accentuates the texture of the wet sails. In the background, other sailboats are heading out to sea, their silhouettes standing out against a sky heavy with clouds, almost stormy.

The gilt frame features a wide, elegantly patinated molding, adorned with floral motifs and raised scrolls. Its generous profile highlights the canvas, while the warm gilding, nuanced by time, lends it a classic and authentic charm.*****Period: Late 19th century. Good overall condition.
