Description

Beautiful antique blown-glass carafe, complete with its original stopper, featuring a rounded and flattened body topped by an engraved neck that gives the impression that the material itself has been subtly twisted by the engraver's hand. Deep and richly executed ramage engravings cover the entire surface, creating an elegant interplay of arabesque motifs. Although this carafe bears no maker's mark, comparison with other pieces of similar shape and decoration suggests an attribution to the Baccarat manufacture, dating to the Art Nouveau period. Good overall condition, with no major defects to report.
