Description

Large oil on canvas, 17th century. A soldier presents the head of St. John the Baptist, placed on a platter, to Salome. She wears a helmet adorned with blue, white, and red ostrich feathers. Her complexion is very delicate, a slight smile on her lips, her eyes lowered. She wears a richly decorated dress and jewelry typical of the period. The saint's head is pale, his eyes closed, and striking. To the left, a servant presents the platter. France, good condition, original stretcher.
