Description

Oil on panel. Tuscan-Emilian school, late 15th-early 16th century. The Virgin Mary is depicted seated on a throne, holding the Child in her arms and flanked by two angels; the figures are placed under a canopy, emphasizing their regal status. A monogram is on the back, likely identifying the artist. The panel shows some paint loss and damage to the wood. It is presented in a late 19th-century frame. The item is in good condition, with minor signs of wear. We try to present the item's actual condition as accurately as possible with the photos.
