Description

The Kodak No. 1 Pocket Junior "Green" is a folding camera produced by Eastman Kodak between 1926 and 1933. The bellows are also green; the shape of the kickstand and the typography used for the Kodak logo are Art Deco inspired. This model uses 120 film, allowing for six 2 1/4 x 3 1/4 inch exposures without reloading. It is equipped with a Meniscus Achromatic lens and a Kodo shutter offering instant and timed exposures. Note that the colored versions, including the green one, were only available in the United States; in Europe, only the black model was sold.
