Description

An elegant and decorative gilt bronze chandelier, possibly originally a billiard room chandelier from the 19th century, richly adorned with stylized dragons and naturalistic scrolls. The finely crafted structure features an elegant acanthus leaf motif at the top and two facing dragons supporting the chandelier's structure. At the center is a large green opaline glass shade forming the main light, surrounded by an openwork bronze gallery. On either side, two scrolled arms support frosted glass tulip shades. This model was originally designed to operate on gas in the 19th century. The quality of the bronze and the refinement of the decoration testify to the meticulous craftsmanship characteristic of late 19th-century decorative production. This chandelier is a spectacular decorative piece, ideal
