Description

Large Format Painting "007 Cash Me" (2016) by Domingo Zapata - Acrylic Large painting "007 Cash Me" (2016) by Domingo Zapata, 48 x 60 inches canvas (approx. 122 x 152 cm) executed in acrylic on canvas. Part of his "007" series, this artwork reinvents the cinematic myth by featuring the legendary Sean Connery (James Bond) and Ursula Andress. The entire piece is treated in Zapata's signature bold neo-expressionist pop-art style, combining vibrant colors, graffiti-inspired text (such as the inscription "CASH IS KING"), and dynamic brushstrokes. The imagery reinvented here by Domingo Zapata originates from a legendary illustration by American artist Mitchell Hooks. Initially created for the theatrical release poster of Dr. No (1962)--the very first film of the saga--this historic composition depicts

Sean Connery in the role of 007 (holding his famous Walther PPK pistol) alongside Ursula Andress as Honey Ryder. While other creators like David Chasman and Joseph Caroff shaped the film's overall visual identity (including the famous "007" gun logo), it is indeed Mitchell Hooks to whom we owe this original representation of the characters, which has become an absolute pop culture classic that Zapata electrifies here with his urban energy.
