Description

Frédéric Menguy, born in Paris on January 28, 1927, and died in Paris on March 23, 2007 (French School). From a very young age, Frédéric Menguy was passionate about drawing and painting, training in evening classes at the City of Paris art studios. In 1956, while working as an art teacher, he devoted himself entirely to painting and lithography. From 1966 onward, after discovering the Corbières mountains where he settled for a time, his painting became very colorful. Patrice de la Perrière paid tribute to him, stating that behind a seemingly ostentatious joy, Frédéric Menguy's paintings evoke a certain nostalgia for our childlike spirit. Frédéric Menguy's works are featured in numerous renowned private collections. Some have also been acquired by the French state. This beautiful
