Description

Antique large Chinese export blue and white porcelain octagonal plate dating to the Qianlong period of the Qing dynasty, 18th century.
This beautiful example of Chinese export porcelain made for the European market is decorated in cobalt blue with a refined garden landscape. The scene shows cranes beneath a pine tree beside flowering peonies and a scholar's rock, with a small garden fence in the background.
The crane and pine tree are important symbols in Chinese culture representing longevity and harmony, while the peony symbolizes prosperity and honor. Together they form a traditional auspicious decorative theme.
The central scene is framed by a delicate geometric diaper border, while the rim carries a
