Description

An elegant small cherrywood side table, also known as a salon table or writing table, in the Louis XV style. Early 20th-century work. With its curved lines and lightness, this small salon table was originally designed to be easily moved as needed. It features cabriole legs ending in discreet little sabots. The apron is gracefully curved, with a bracket-shaped cutout at the bottom, adding visual softness to the overall design. The tabletop, with its distinctive "beak-shaped" edge, has a slightly raised and molded rim, providing a secure surface for holding objects. It is covered in intact dark green leather, adorned with a gilt vignette around the edge and a central fleuron motif. This elegant little table has two side drawers with finely chased gilt bronze handles. A charming and refined little
