Description

Wood marquetry and brass stringing adorn the various sides; the upper section is highlighted by a row of pearls. The drawer opens along the apron to reveal a small cylindrical shelf containing writing implements: an inkwell with its reservoir, and in the center, a compartment for quills and pens. A writing tablet unfolds in the center; it is covered in black leather and rests on the drawer at the front. It contains several drawers and a central storage space. The base is beautifully crafted from sheep's bone, with a richly worked stretcher. The scrolled feet are further enhanced by brass elements. The wood has a beautiful color and patina. There is visible wear to the leather. There are small losses of marquetry in some places, as well as small losses of wood at some corners. A row of wooden beads
