Description

Opening with wide drawers--four single and four double--this spectacular display counter dates from the 19th century and was part of the furnishings of a weighing and scales shop located in the historic heart of Mulhouse, a city with a glorious industrial past, long known as the French Manchester. The piece is made of painted softwood with a beautiful patina showing signs of wear. The left side is at a right angle, while the right side has a chamfered edge. The open lower section is continuous and has no back. Restored in our workshops. Delivery is possible upon request. For the stoneware jars and other display items, which are not included, please contact us for a price quote.
