Description

A charming garden table resting on an elegant, richly crafted wrought iron base, formed of decorative scrolls and volutes. The ironwork is meticulously executed with decorative medallions in gilded metal and a stylized central motif connecting the crossbars. The tabletop is made of red Belgium marble, likely from the quarries of Namur, recognizable by its beautiful red and grey hue with white veins. This type of furniture was intended for the terraces, winter gardens, or verandas of bourgeois homes in the south of France during the late 19th century. Signs of wear consistent with age and use.
