Description

A beautiful set of Directoire chairs, comprising two cherrywood chairs, one with a straw seat; three are upholstered in satin fabric with a First Empire laurel wreath motif. There are slight differences in the tapered legs and the curule backrests at the ends, and a generous arched front band. These chairs complement each other perfectly, and their quality speaks for itself, as does their well-preserved condition. They form a distinguished and elegant table setting, foreshadowing the Empire period and the end of the Louis XVI style. The beautiful cherrywood from which they are made is sound, and these stylish chairs are sturdy, ideal for a game or an intimate dinner for four, in a refined and elegant style full of strength and decorative appeal.
