Description

An elegant bronze sculpture with a dark patina depicting Julius Caesar as Roman emperor, shown standing in an authoritative pose, his right arm raised in a gesture of skill or command. The emperor is represented in antique military attire, wearing a richly decorated breastplate with relief scenes and a draped cloak falling to one side. The bronze work is distinguished by the fineness of the modeling, particularly in the details of the breastplate, drapery, and hair, characteristic of the historicist productions of the second half of the 19th century inspired by Antiquity. The sculpture rests on a base of veined black marble, emphasizing the overall elegance and providing excellent stability. This type of representation of Julius Caesar reflects the 19th-century taste for great figures of Antiquity and historical subjects,
